

THOSE WHO WERE CAST OUT WHEN THE WORLD COLLIDED, THOSE WHO INHABIT THE GAPS BETWEEN LANGUAGES, REALITIES, NATIONS, CATEGORIES OR GENRES, THEY WERE THE ONES WHO HELD THE FRAGMENTS TOGETHER AND THOSE WHO MAY RECONFIGURE EVERYTHING AGAIN

MUME (Museo Mexicano/Mexican Museum) is a nomadic anti-museum created by Oscar Cueto, aiming to provoke new narratives in the context of evolving geopolitical changes and global migration. It invites international cultural workers to present collaborative projects in Austria. For this ocasión, creator Elisa Andessner (AT), driven by an interest in feminism and gender roles, has invited the artists Polina Porras (MX/RU) and Ángel Alado (MX) to develop works on these topics.

While concepts such as center-periphery and self-other have aided in understanding postcolonial global political organization, the 17th edition of MUME has chosen to reflect on a world characterized by relative centers, disrupted binaries, mobile diasporas, and "multiple selves" — Argentine philosopher María Lugones suggests that this is where the patriarchal/colonial system faces its greatest resistance. Perhaps, in a poetic twist of fate, the future of gender equality and new social organization lies with those who have chosen or have been compelled to embody multiple "selves," challenging traditional notions of sexuality or family, speaking several languages, and inhabiting diverse worlds simultaneously due to forced migrations and exclusions based on gender, ethnicity, or social and geographical conditions. MUME has also invited the maiz-collective, who will present "In the beginning there was lust and sorrow: Kick-Off maiz 30th Anniversary!" a celebration that acknowledges the struggle for the rights of sex workers as one of the foundations of the collective. This special edition presents a retrospective of the 16 previous issues of the Nomadic Museum through documentation and works from its collection.
